The keynote lectures and podium present and discuss the handling of big buildings in small cities. In historic and grown european cities, especially in small scaled Switzerland, the question of scale of big buildings are an important issue. Do large scale visionary plans fit our cities? How can our small scaled confederate mentality and system cope with the global big scale?

After three keynote presentations, Judit Solt, chief editor of Tec21, will discuss these interesting issues with three prominent architects and planners.
